John Hofmann, founder

firms like ours to get overlooked when it comes time to honor those making a difference in the local community by large companies such as UpCity, regardless of our history or attention to detail. This is a big win for our team, and even more so for our current and future clients! This time, quality outshines sheer volume of numbers, which is what we strive for daily."

John Hofmann founded fusion Marketing in 2013 as a small business owner who took control of his own marketing. It was a lot of fun for him to develop non-obtrusive methods of attracting customers to his health food business. As a result, John started offering his services to other local small businesses. As a small business owner himself, John understands the subtleties of running a business and the marketing methods to help his clients flourish.

Fusion Marketing is all about delivering the best customer service, with an in-house team that brings together years of experience in marketing and business development from a professional who knows small businesses.
