According to IMARC Group's latest report, titled "United States Wi-Fi Chipset Market Price Value: Industry Trends, Share, Size, Growth,

Opportunity and Forecast 2021-2026",

The United States Wi-Fi chipset market reached a strong growth in 2020. A Wi-Fi chipset is a wireless transmitter that is used to send information to mobile devices for wireless networking. These chipsets enable the users to access networked services without the requirement of standard cables. The growing adoption of multi-band routers that offer stronger Wi-Fi frequency has increased the overall demand for Wi-Fi chipsets in the United States.

The United States Wi-Fi chipsets market is primarily driven by the rising investments by the Government in advanced technologies for the construction of smart cities. With the increasing penetration of the Internet of Things (IoT), these chipsets are also widely incorporated in home appliances like air-conditioners, water heaters, washing machines and televisions. Wi-Fi chipsets form an essential component of smart houses with IoT-connected electronics. Moreover, Wi-Fi chipsets are used in cars with internet access to support vehicle and mobility management, and safety measures and driving assistance. On account of these factors, the market is expected to witness positive growth in the coming years. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the global market to continue its robust growth during the forecast period (2021-2026).
