“This is our 10th annual Eat & Be Well event, and we are doing everything we can to make it one to remember,” comments Project Boon’s Chris Suchánek. He goes on to note that, following last year’s COVID-related adjustments, this year’s event will return to the standard hot meal service. There will also be opportunities for attendees to connect with local community resources and social services. In addition, this year, we are proud to partner with the Grocery Outlet in Rialto to provide free uncooked turkeys and Thanksgiving-themed food boxes, while supplies last.

The annual Eat & Be Well event is always memorable, both for attendees as well as volunteers. “Volunteering for Eat and Be Well is a very warm experience,” comments Alejandra Sanchez, a past volunteer. “You get to see so many people come together and be supportive to achieve a goal: to help feed families and provide distributions for the communities that need the extra
