As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the purchase behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Market Trends:

The expanding application of almond oil in the pharmaceutical industry on account of its various benefits, such as reducing irritable bowel syndrome and elevating high-density lipoprotein levels, is primarily driving the almond oil market. Moreover, the increasing awareness among individuals towards the adverse impact of chemicals, including parabens and phthalates, utilized in cosmetics represents another growth-inducing factor. Besides this, the escalating need for natural and organic products with non-genetically modified organisms (GMO), plant-based ingredients, and clean labels is further propelling the market growth. Additionally, the rising utilization of almond oil in the food and beverage (F&B) industry as a functional ingredient to manufacture several food products is expected to fuel the market over the forecasted period.
