As someone who has always aspired to be in the space of media, being a part of this series is a huge deal for me. I feel incredibly blessed to have a hand in sharing our message with the world.”

Microbe Formulas, established in 2017, has set out to restore hope and health around the globe through producing all-natural health products, educational media, and guided wellness programs.

Dr. Jay Davidson, co-founder of Microbe Formulas, shares, “The uniqueness of our company lies in our focus on foundational health first. In modern medicine, the focus is on treating each symptom, while, in our world, we focus on taking care of root causes, facilitating healthy processes throughout the entire system. This supports our customers in feeling better overall and having sustainable wellness.”

The company began with two doctors who wanted to provide effective, natural solutions for gut health and detoxification. Dr. Jay Davidson and Dr. Todd Watts, co-founders of Microbe Formulas, were drawn together through the commonality of personal unresolved health issues. This ultimately motivated them to dive into holistic medicine to find “solutions that work.” Over time, the two doctors discovered the importance of drainage, gut health, and natural detox support.

Microbe has multiple innovative health products to offer, as well as a 4-month protocol program. In particular, two areas make them stand out: one, their flagship gut product Mimosa Pudica Seed, and two, their proprietary BioActive Carbon technology within the majority of their all-natural products. Microbe’s episode of “New Frontiers” will go into more detail on these special natural remedies and their benefits, along with sharing stories of hope and health.

The documentary episodes will first air on national television on Fox Business Channel, reaching 71 million viewers. It will also be available on-demand through Amazon Prime Video, Bloomberg TV, Google Play, iTunes, Roku, and many other platforms.

Dylan Hamar, Microbe Formulas Media Manager, led video editing and production for the Microbe segment. Hamar adds, “As someone who has always aspired to be in the space of media, being a part of this series is a huge deal for me. I feel incredibly blessed to have a hand in sharing our message with the world.”
