MEXC Global and ByBit list CropBytes

CropBytes has over 200K downloads across Apple and Google app stores, already featuring in an impressive list of publications. The game allows players to create and build their own farm and is similar to hugely successful farm sim Stardew Valley - on blockchain.

Players can earn the in-game currency, the CBX token, to help grow and expand their farm, and earn rewards in crypto as they do so. The thriving community also allows the trading of rare assets and proposed NFTs between players.

Gamers love the farming and strategic business challenges involved in playing and growing their virtual farm. In this virtual world, gamers own farms, grow crops, raise animals and produce goods to sell and trade with.

The launch on MEXC Global and Bybit represents the first project to launch since the exchanges announced their long-term strategic partnership, and will mean the 10 million users across the two exchanges will be able to buy and sell the token.

"It's a super exciting time for CropBytes and the three-year-old game community. With the listing of CBX token in the joint IEO, we take our first steps towards decentralization and making second life gaming a source of income for gamers in the metaverse," said Sandeep Kumar, Founder at CropBytes.

The CBX utility token is an integral part of the CropBytes ecosystem.

The highlights of the project include:

*The fundamental innovation in the game is the Balanced Economy, which sets it apart from all the crypto games in the market today

*There is a healthy mix of fungible and non-fungible tokens (NFTs) while most other games today are focused on NFTs only. This solves multiple issues around liquidity, ultimately contributing to the game's growth and development.
