The GPost platform offers the disaster-prone region a stable emergency notification system. "As we onboard more Haitian citizens to the free app," says Tracy Allan, CEO of GPost, "GPost will help HRA to send notifications to individuals, team members, and groups in a dynamically identified area." Crucially, the app can operate independently of the vulnerable phone system, vital in distributing disaster relief. "GPost has finalized an agreement with Haïti Renewal Alliance," says the CEO, "that will see a network of users communicate photos and information to help prioritize supplies and aid."

"In a region still reeling from a 7.2 magnitude earthquake, and amid hurricane season, GPost will significantly help the postal service and help with the delivery of recovery aid throughout Haïti", Allan explains.

With the potential to revolutionize postal services, emergency communication, and disaster relief, GPost continues to change the way people and goods interact throughout the Caribbean.
