Dr. Todd Ovokaitys, stem cell expert and thought leader

About Dr. Todd Ovokaitys

Dr. Todd Ovokaitys was first in his class in high school and won the coveted Bucky pioneer award. He was also at the top of his class at Northwestern University with the highest possible grade point average and after two years was one of 26 people accepted into an accelerated undergraduate and medical training program at Johns Hopkins University and medical school. He then completed specialty training in internal medicine and subspecialty training and pulmonary and critical care medicine at Georgetown University hospital. He was assessed by a faculty committee as the best of all the residents across the board. He was inspired to move to California to understand energy medicine and shortly after the journey had a vision of communicating with the pure consciousness of DNA. This has resulted in co-inventing a laser based inter-dimensional platform which has numerous US and international patents granted in the areas of nutraceuticals, agriculture including cannabis, and especially stem cell biology. He also pursues and provides training in the area of psycho emotional medicine, getting at the core root of any condition, physical or psychiatric, that can offer lasting relief. These discoveries have the potential to be a part of what may revolutionize and personalize the practice of medicine. He is also the composer and at times co-conductor of the Lemurian choirs that create patterns of tones and information that can accelerate expansion of consciousness.
