/EINPresswire.com/ -- ReactJS development is a cross-platform app development framework that helps in building a dynamic library with high performance. It makes for creative and interactive UI's, simple views, efficient updates, and renders just the right components when your data changes. It builds encapsulated components that manage their 'state' and composes them to make complex user interfaces. It has component logic in JavaScript instead of templates. It eases passing rich data through the app and keeps the state out of DOM. It can be scaled to develop and imbibe new features without re-writing existing code. It does necessarily require JSX. ReactJS is more like an open-source JavaScript library rather than a framework. Used for building user interfaces, it suits rendering performance.

React makes use of a graphic processing unit, making for faster and better when it comes to time-sensitive projects. It can be the future of hybrid mobile apps for one or more of the reasons:

- Presence of React's virtual DOM
- Easy to create UI Test Cases
- Easy to reuse the code components
- It provides support for both front-end and back-end
- It contains a specialized chrome extension that makes it easy to debug
- It can display 'components' in large amounts quickly and does not require re-writing.

- It improves debugging speed, making it easier for the developer
- It makes use of reusable components, which amplifies hybrid applications to render natively.
- Shared Codebase Between Android & iOS
- React is especially for providing an assistant to mobile applications.
- It is so convenient that it propels fast development and mobile-friendly application development.
- React provides multiple tools such as integration libraries for maps and standard UI controls etc.
- It accounts for powerful animations, reduced time and cost, hot reloading, ease of integration, community support, and third-party plugin compatibility.
- Same Look & Feel as Native
