Kosher foods represent food and beverages that are manufactured conforming to the Jewish dietary regulations. Kosher food laws necessitate absolute isolation of milk and meat-based products derived from seafood, pigs, rabbits, camels, kangaroos, etc. It includes the use of meat, dairy, and pareve products procured through ritualistic manner to produce bread, pasta, juices, cereals, frozen meals, snacks, etc. Kosher foods offer several benefits, including higher quality, safety standards, minimal risks of developing E. Coli and salmonella, etc. It also assists in reducing blood cholesterol levels and is suitable for vegetarian consumers.

Kosher Food Market Report

As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the industry behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Kosher Food Market Trends:

The growing prevalence of lactose intolerance among the masses is primarily driving the global kosher food market. Furthermore, the escalating demand for kosher food products among non-Jewish consumers on account of the elevating awareness about its benefits is also propelling the market growth. Besides this, shifting consumer preferences toward allergen-free, clean label, and organic food products is further augmenting the global market. Additionally, the increasing consumer demand for ethically and locally sourced ingredients is acting as another growth-inducing factor. Numerous quick-service restaurants (QSRs), hotels, and cafes are also experimenting with high-quality kosher-certified foods to provide customers with a unique and authentic experience. Apart from this, the rising consumer health consciousness and the escalating demand for vegan dietary products are further expected to fuel the kosher food market in the coming years.
