The Las Vegas-based company — the Official Exclusive In-Game Seat Exchange platform of the Las Vegas Aviators Minor League Baseball team — didn’t disclose the terms of the capital raise. Notable personal investors include Chase Fraser (of FM Capital) and Ernie Pomerantz (former Managing Director of Warburg Pincus).

“This funding allows us to advance our ‘Fun-tastic’ brand in Las Vegas as the best event ticket marketplace for locals, business and casual tourists, who will save more money on tickets purchased on LuvSeats (versus leading resale marketplaces),” said Darcy Silver.

“With our recent expansion across the country, we see our community using LuvSeats again and again to search for and purchase from thousands of events closer to home.”

LuvSeats is the Aviators’ exclusive platform to perform during-the-game, ‘3rd Market’ transactions allowing fans to sell their unused or abandoned seats, buy and move seats ahead during the game.
