Watson Tate Savory Joins McMillan Pazdan Smith

The organization's collective strength in design and project management talent sets clients up to be served by more than a century's worth of planning, programming and design expertise with numerous local, state, and national design awards. Watson Tate Savory is a former AIA SC Firm Award recipient and McMillan Pazdan Smith was ENR's Southeast Firm of the Year in 2019.

This expanded team amplifies creative value for our clients and development initiatives dedicated to community and campus vibrancy.”

McMillan Pazdan Smith will expand the office in Columbia, South Carolina while adding new team members to their fast-growing Charlotte office.

Both firms are aligned in values and vision and have established reputations for delivering impactful, award-winning projects for public and private missioned clients—including an impressive combined design portfolio of college and university educational environments across the Southeast.

"This was an exciting opportunity for us to bring on an experienced firm with a strong practice, shared values, great partner relationships and an impressive rigor in design," said MPS Founding Principal Brad Smith.

"This was the right time for us to join a like-minded firm to form a stronger-together, client and community-focused presence in the Carolinas, while also providing a great opportunity for our people," said Tom Savory, Principal, Watson Tate Savory.

Chad Cousins, McMillan Pazdan Smith's CEO, said "We are focused on strategic investments which grow the positive impact of thoughtful planning and design locally and regionally. This expanded team amplifies creative value for our clients and development initiatives dedicated to community and campus vibrancy."
