When asked why BLACC chose the platform it did to launch, CEO Demetra Adams Davis said, "The poetry and art contest are fun ways to drive attention to serious culture and community perspectives. It also provides an opportunity for all people of color to showcase their talent."

"As BLACC continues to expand so does the framework that is needed to support these artists. BLACC is lifting those who seek a powerful platform to showcase their art. We're asking people to lift them too. They can do that by supporting this effort," stated Fran Briggs, Publicist to BLACC.
