PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND, UNITED STATES, November 8, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Taking up a degree in the medical field is challenging. The challenges are more in combination with the academic stress with high educational fees. To avoid this from weighing students down, Dr. Eugene Kramer has decided to offer scholarship funds to qualified students. The upcoming medical students should not be allowed to pass through the struggles of raising funds for their education. So, the announcement from Dr. Eugene came at a time when many medical students in the United States were facing challenges with high educational costs.

"Medical school is challenging and costs a lot. The cost of education in the United States is already high, but medical school is something else. So, those interested in medical school must be ready to battle between demanding academic requirements and high fees. We are aware of these and have decided to assist through an annual scholarship. There are a few rules to apply. The first eligibility factor for the applicant is that they need to be a current student that plans to have a career in medicine. So, applicants must be current medical students in the United States Universities or high school students who aspire for medical school. It is mainly for the upcoming medical students in the United States," said Dr. Eugene Kramer.

"Interestingly, the scholarship application is ongoing, and the medical students and upcoming medical doctors are eligible, so there is an opportunity to get financial assistance through the scholarship. More so, the scholarship comes with simple application criteria and processes which involves an essay competition. In addition to the essay writing competition, applicants should provide their personal information, including their names, bio, and contact info so the winner can receive their award. Early completion of the form is encouraged," added Dr. Eugene Kramer.

Dr. Eugene's announcement on his official Twitter page attracted the attention of students across the country. These include medical students, doctors, upcoming medical doctors, high school students, and other Twitter users. The Twitter followers were busy commenting on the post, and one of the happy followers wrote, "Having come across this invaluable Tweet from Dr. Kramer, It has made my day. Hopefully, more people will stand a chance of benefiting from the scholarship."

Dr. Kramer's team member also commented on the post, saying, "It is indeed great news for all the upcoming medical students in the United States, who are dealing with the rising costs of education. Through the scholarship, there is an opportunity to earn funds towards tuition. Any interested students can just check the requirements for the scholarship on the official page and apply accordingly."

For those interested in learning more about Dr. Eugene Kramer Scholarship for Future Doctors of America, the opportunity is now. Check through the official page on Twitter to read more about the scholarship, his biography, and more.
