According to the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases, prediabetes is a serious health condition where blood sugar levels are higher than normal, but not high enough yet to be diagnosed as type 2 diabetes. Per the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), more than 1 in 3 U.S. adults have prediabetes—that’s 88 million people—but the majority of people don’t know they have it. Moreover, more than 34 million people in the United States have diabetes, and 1 in 5 of them don't know they have it. Those who are unaware that they have diabetes are susceptible to health risks that poorly managed blood sugar can pose. For this reason, National Diabetes Month is a critically important awareness event.

Diabetes affects everyone, but it disproportionately affects black, indigenous, and people of color (BIPOC) communities. The CDC reports that the prevalence of diabetes diagnoses is 14.7% among American Indians/Alaska Natives, nearly double that of white people (7.5 %) in the United States. Diabetes has also been diagnosed in 12.5 % of Hispanic people, 11.7 % of non-Hispanic black people, and 9.2 % of non-Hispanic Asian people. Awareness and early detection are key for all persons at risk.

Providing customer service and specialty diabetes care since 1994, JQ Medical supports those with diabetes by simplifying their daily healthcare routine by ensuring they have the products they need for their optimum health.
