

Documentary "Vulnerable Innocence"

IndieFEST selects documentary for online child protection for award

LONDON, ONTARIO, CANADA,
November 12, 2021 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- A Charlene Doak-Gebauer film, "Vulnerable Innocence", produced for Internet Sense First, has won a prestigious Award of Recognition from the IndieFEST Film Awards.

Producer/Director – Charlene Doak-Gebauer – “Very grateful for an excellent experience with an amazing team of volunteers worldwide, including children. We have worked together, proving we can ignore borders and oceans, and film virtually with success, to provide a meaningful film about online child protection. It has been my vision to bring communities together to emphasize the need for a global initiative to protect children online, using Digital Supervision. On behalf of the entire team, thank you IndieFEST for recognizing the importance of this film, and for granting us an Award of Recognition:

Contemporary Issues/Awareness Raising. It is an honor.”

Co-Director – Nancy Lynch – “The level of support from participants around the world is a testament to the importance of ensuring the documentary’s message is heard loud and clear. I am hopeful this film will be a wake-up call to parents, caregivers, and others to be vigilant in protecting children from online predators.”

Final Cut Editor – Horace Williams, Jr. - "I believe 'Vulnerable Innocence' will be wildly successful worldwide as the film doesn't stop at merely educating viewers to the danger children and parents face online; it provides multiple detailed, explicit, and effective strategies for parents and caregivers to design their own digital supervision policy to protect their children from online abuse. This film is a Godsend for caregivers who are currently confused and overwhelmed with how on Earth to keep their children safe online."

Casting Director – Arpad Andrew Horvath – “A sobering, in-depth look into a world that exists beyond the computer screen. Compelling interviews about a seemingly invisible threat but one that exists and is capable of destroying our children. A must see.”

Music – Frank Davis – “I am very pleased to have donated my song ‘Angel In Your Eyes’, to be used in this documentary. It was inspired by the story of a little girl who was sexually exploited at the age of four, and later killed by a drunk driver. Such an example of ‘vulnerable innocence’. I am sure she is smiling down from heaven, seeing this documentary make a difference for many children globally.”
