

EvidenceCare Opens Seattle Office Led by New SVP of Technology

EvidenceCare has opened a second office in Seattle led by new SVP of Technology, John Tacke, to grow its engineering team and expand its West Coast reach.

NASHVILLE, TN, USA, November 15, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ --

EvidenceCare, a Nashville-based clinical decision support software company, is expanding its reach into Seattle, Washington, with the opening of its second office located in the Sixth and Lenora building in the heart of downtown Seattle.

EvidenceCare recently hired a new SVP of Technology, John Tacke, who was located in Seattle prior to joining EvidenceCare. Tacke relocated to Nashville but has grown EvidenceCare's engineering team through developer talent on the West Coast.

The projected need for more developers, along with the company's planned expansion on the West Coast, led EvidenceCare to make the strategic decision to open an office location in Seattle.

We have incredible, talented people working on our products, and it shows by the technology they're creating for our clients.”

EvidenceCare has more than doubled its revenue and number of clients over the last 12 months leading to rapid expansion of the team.

“We are thrilled to have John on the team to lead the charge in expanding our incredible engineering team,” said EvidenceCare CEO, Bo Bartholomew. “Our products are making such a big impact for clinicians and health systems, and we want to ensure they continue to evolve with the best technology.”

“It’s been a privilege to join EvidenceCare to build and shape the future of our engineering team,” said Tacke. “We have incredible, talented people working on our products, and it shows by the technology they’re creating for our clients.”

Tacke has over 30 years of technology experience and has led teams of software development professionals for hundreds of applications and platforms for various sizes of companies and industries. Although located in Nashville now, Tacke travels to Seattle on a monthly basis for full team collaboration.
