Metal Fiber Market

Metal fibers are thin filaments composed of pure metals, alloys, or metalloids. They are characterized by high-temperature resistance, thermal regulation, and antistatic properties. They are widely used for multiple applications, such as household furnishings, carpet decorations, woven and knitted fabrics, antibacterial textiles and filtration.

As the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis takes over the world, we are continuously tracking the changes in the markets, as well as the industry behaviours of the consumers globally and our estimates about the latest market trends and forecasts are being done after considering the impact of this pandemic.

Metal Fiber Market Trends:

The global market is primarily driven by the rising product utilization across the automotive sector. Metal fibers find extensive applications in lightweight vehicles due to their excellent thermal properties. This, in confluence with increasing government initiatives to enhance the fuel efficiency of vehicles, has propelled the market growth. Besides this, since fabrics made from metal fibers display excellent compressibility, they are extensively being utilized in the production of bags, carpets, and garments, across the globe, thereby providing an impetus to the market growth. Some of the other factors contributing to the market growth include the escalating product demand from the consumer electronics sector and extensive research and development (R&D) activities.
