Search Engine Optimization (SEO) is the process of affecting the visibility of a website or a web page in a search engine's "natural" or unpaid ("organic") search results. In general, the earlier (or higher ranked on the search results page), and more frequently a site appears in the search results list, the more visitors it will receive from the search engine's users. As an Internet marketing strategy, SEO considers how search engines work, what people search for, the actual search terms or keywords typed into search engines and which search engines are preferred by their targeted audience. Optimizing a website may involve editing its content, HTML and associated coding to both increase its relevance to specific keywords and to remove barriers to the indexing activities of search engines. G3 Development is a specialist in these competitive arenas. G3 Development (G3) loves SEO and speaks it fluently!

G3 Development Marketing is a nationally recognized digital marketing agency that connects companies with customers through data-driven marketing. We are a boutique, focused, digital powerhouse company that combines the most extensive real-time consumer data set with personalized and timely dynamic custom online ads. All online actions are executed by local, digital-experts that allow us to exceed performance in the industry. Real-Time Platform Analytics allow G3 to identify target audiences based on real-time in-market data, demographics, psychographics, and online intent. All this technology, coupled with our proprietary algorithm, enables G3 to then place hyper-targeted ads in front of those individuals with high frequency using a combination of digital channels. Our focus on clients allows G3 Development to consistently deliver business outcomes.

When people needed or wanted something in the old days; they would look up information in the Yellow Pages. Today, people turn to 'search engines' to find what they want or need. Each day, on average, Google searches currently total over 400,000,000. When people are looking to purchase something they want/need, more-and-more they're going "on line" to find out what other people think or say about a certain product, service or brand.

The relevancy that influences people's buying behavior is other people's conversations. That is if they can find a conversation and if it provides the value that people are looking for. If one can learn "how" to use social media correctly then they will understand "what" the market is looking for and "where" they are looking. To sum up: For many, the Web is not a place to look for information — it's the ONLY place.

G3 Development Provides Powerful Social Media Solutions. If you think about “the real reason why” you need to engage in Social Media, it all boils down to these basics:

1. Forming the right relations and
2. Doing so the right way

Many business leaders are still at the fundamental stage of asking, “Why is Social Media important for my business?” This very question begs another question: “Have you been paying attention to the marketplace?”

Ok, so, most people will answer these questions quite easily. And here’s how it usually goes: “Yes, of course I’ve been paying attention to the marketplace and Social Media is obviously important because it seems to be everywhere I turn. I’m hearing about Social Media but I still have the need to understand why are businesses using it and why is it creating so much attention.”

The answer to “Why” you need G3 Development and their premier online services is more closely related to “How and What” a business does in order to engage in market relations with the aim of creating an opportunity for a business transaction. Why do businesses exist? Primarily to: (a) Create value and (b) Attract a market who wants the value proposition enough to engage.

However, the “How” of doing this has dramatically changed in the last 2 years from “Push Marketing” to “Pull Marketing.” This transformation has all happened via relevant and relative conversations that attract the market you seek to you.

Common Mistake #1: Hiring the Wrong Coach. There are a lot of people tagging themselves as “Social Media Experts, Gurus or Certified Specialists.” Most of the people making these claims are individuals/organizations who offer “basic Social Media skill sets and copy methodologies” which, in the end, will get you the wrong kind of connections, a lot of the wrong followers as well as a bad reputation in the marketplace. Just like in the ‘Indiana Jones’ movie, you need to “choose wisely” or you will be ‘perishing’ from a Social Media perspective.

Communications is a system to leverage your organizations ability to connect with your market; Social Media is “the new” communications system. Communications is about reach. Communicating is about relational dynamics between people. Social Media provides the means to effectively communicate with your market.

However, communicating in human rather than institutional terms. If you are not communicating (listening first, initiating second) then, how in the world do you expect to create relationships with people and businesses that may want the value you offer? “When” your customers and prospects are engaging about you, your industry or your products and services — you need to be there listening. Otherwise, how will you gain the necessary market intelligence? How will you be enabled to respond or even be aware of problems or needs? If you are not present when and where the conversations are occurring, then you are truly “out of touch” with your market. To sum up: For many, the Web isn’t a place to look for information — it’s the only place. Now you know why.
