The wide presence of well-established education infrastructures across Europe is primarily driving the e-learning market in the region. Moreover, several prestigious European universities are also offering blended learning programs to students, thereby augmenting the demand for personalized courses and customized learning tools. Besides this, due to the outbreak of the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) and the consequent imposition of lockdowns, numerous educational institutes have switched to online learning solutions. Additionally, various companies are utilizing e-learning tools and modules, such as gamification and LMS, to provide corporate training to employees working from home. This is projected to further bolster the Europe e-learning market growth in the coming years. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to exhibit strong growth during 2021-2026.
