Market Trends and Drivers:

The escalating demand for online appointment booking on account of COVID-19 pandemic is driving the appointment scheduling software market, particularly across the healthcare facilities. This software enables patients to book appointments, collect essential data, fill vaccination forms, etc. Furthermore, the rising adoption of appointment scheduling software by educational institutions for web conferencing, class scheduling, automating reminders, etc., is also propelling the market growth. Besides this, the elevating levels of digitization of business operations and the increasing sales of smartphones are further augmenting the global market for appointment scheduling software. Moreover, the rising consumer consciousness towards health and wellness is further propelling the product demand across beauty professionals and wellness studios in scheduling consultations, healing sessions, therapies, etc. Additionally, the increasing number of retail stores, photography studios, tours and travels, health clubs and gyms, daycare centers, etc., is also expected to fuel the appointment scheduling market in the coming years.
