A panel of experts will meet to discuss and share valuable insights about resilience, as it relates to limb loss. The panel consists of the following individuals:

- Dr. Ivan Edwards, CEO of Jovana Rehabilitation Medicine and Pain, a board certified PM&R physician with years of experience and expertise in musculoskeletal medicine, neuro-rehabilitation and pain management.
- Jesse Rettele, CPO, LPO, a highly regarded prosthetist at New Life Brace and Limb.
- Tim Erhardt, of Laurel Ridge Treatment Center, a dynamic voice from a leading authority in mental health.
- Dan Blasini, BSN, a respected nurse, and a decorated veteran with a passion for veteran affairs.
- Linda Woods, CEO of REviFY Med spa--moderator and a dynamic entrepreneur.
- Thomas Bourgeois, a renowned paralympic athlete.

Team Resilience - San Antonio, TX

Unstoppable

The symposium will be an interactive event, an engaging discussion of "Pre and postoperative care of traumatic limb amputations."

Dr. Edwards postulates that the symposium will show the importance of comprehensive, integrative care in dealing with limb loss. "Recovering from a traumatic event, like limb loss, requires a comprehensive approach," he adds.

In the same vein, Jesse Rettele states that "connecting patients with traumatic amputations to comprehensive, multidisciplinary, patient centric prosthetic care" is crucial in the continuum of care.

Mental health plays an important role in resilience.

The ensuing PTSD, associated with limb loss, including treatment options will be discussed as well. Tim Erhardt, of Laurel Ridge Treatment Center, will focus a discourse on PTSD.

Some profiles of exemplary people, who have demonstrated resilience, will be portrayed.
