selected the Colorado Fallen Firefighters Foundation (CFFF) in recognition of their efforts and will present a generous donation to CFFF on the night of the rodeo. The CFFF recognizes the firefighters who have fallen while working to protect lives and property in Colorado by supporting families of fallen firefighters. The donation to CFFF assists them in providing resources to families and Fire Departments.

“We are excited to be a partner of this legacy event in Denver, particularly this year as National Western Stock Show opens the first building of their new campus, and we honor all First Responders for their hard work and dedication to saving lives. First Onsite responds to property fires and disasters, many times we are literally right behind firefighters responding to a disaster. We experience firsthand their dedication and hard work saving lives and property. Our entire team is looking forward to the partnership with National Western and CFFF," shared Jeff Johnson, First Onsite's Global CEO.

"We are thrilled to partner with First Onsite for the next two years. First Onsite is a leader in the disaster recovery industry and we look forward to amplifying their message through the 16 days of Stock Show and year-round" says John Ellis, Sr. Vice President, Strategic Partnerships with the National Western Stock Show. "This relationship will spotlight the lifesaving work done by our First Responders, always putting themselves before others."

About Colorado Fallen Firefighters Foundation

The Colorado Fallen Firefighters Foundation was formed in 1989 to recognize the State's fallen firefighters on a permanent memorial and support the fire families who have suffered this loss. The Foundation recognizes all firefighters killed in the line of duty (LODD) whether volunteer, career, union or non-union, structural or wildland. The foundation also recognizes federal firefighters killed while assigned to Colorado fires even if they lived in another state. The Colorado Fallen Firefighter Foundation provides additional, tangible support to the families of those killed in the line of duty. A permanent fund has been established to aid the families of fallen firefighters with services such as counseling and family support, legal aid, education assistance and job training.
