And continued saying that "This is to be done not just for us all in the so-called 'developed' countries, but especially for those children who end up suffering the consequences of active and passive policies from our 'civilized world,' from the petrol wars, the economic wars, and the tyrannies of those who enslave them for their own dirty, shameful and bloody profit."

among children worldwide, and improve children's welfare.

November 20th is an important date as it is the date in 1959 when the UN General Assembly adopted the Declaration of the Rights of the Child. It is also the date in 1989 when the UN General Assembly adopted the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Since 1990, World Children's Day also marks the anniversary of the date that the UN General Assembly adopted both the Declaration and the Convention on children's rights.

Mothers and fathers, teachers, nurses and doctors, government leaders and civil society activists, religious and community elders, corporate key players and media professionals, as well as young people and children themselves, can play an important part in making World Children's Day relevant for their societies, communities, and nations.

Scientology's representative said also that "World Children's Day offers each of us an inspirational entry-point to advocate, promote and celebrate children's rights, translating into dialogues and actions that will build a better world for children. It is important that we celebrate not just with events, but also with knowledge and actions." And he quoted L. Ron Hubbard, the founder of Scientology, saying: "When children become unimportant to a society, that society has forfeited its future."

Arjona finalized his message stating that "we must teach children about Human Rights, teach them The Truth About Drugs, The Way to Happiness, help them to learn how to study, and how to become contributing members of our society, while we should create a better world for them, with them."

And to help the audience on this task, he invited them to watch a video based on the works of Mr. Hubbard, to make "a better life for children and all of us".
