Global Adult Diaper Market Trends:

Growth in the cases of urinary incontinence among geriatrics is the major factor stimulating the demand for adult diapers. The manufacturers have introduced a variety of adult diapers, catering to a large number of consumers, according to their gender and age. For instance, boxer-type diapers are specifically designed for men while pads and underpants are designed for women. In addition to this, they also provide products in different colors and designs with enhanced inner lining containing vitamin E, aloe vera, etc. so as to attract a larger consumer-base. Further, the increasing number of prostate surgeries coupled with rising awareness about personal hygiene have impelled the market growth.

Global Adult Diaper Market Summary:

- On the basis of type, adult pad-type diapers represent the most popular product, accounting for the largest share. These diapers offer a comfortable solution for people with minor issues. Other major segments include adult pant-type and flat-type diapers.
- Based on distribution channel, the market has been divided into pharmacies, convenience stores and online. Currently, pharmacies hold the majority of the market share owing to the presence of the pharmacists who provide advice on their offerings.
- Region-wise, the market has been categorized into Europe, North America, Asia Pacific, Latin America, and Middle East and Africa. Amongst these, North America is the leading market, accounting for nearly a third of the total global market. This can be attributed to the expanding geriatric population and high obesity rates.
