Most of the homeless veterans are males, 91% to be precise. The majority of them come from disadvantaged or comparatively poor communities. They have served in World War 2, Vietnam War, Lebanon, Panama, Korean War, Cold War, Afghanistan, or the military's anti-drug efforts in South America.

Female veterans are increasing at a rapid pace.

According to a report by HUD, female veterans are around 2-3 times more prone to homelessness than any other adult population group in the US. It results in an increasing number of female veterans.

Young veterans are twice as likely to be homeless than the general public.
