The market for wallpaper is growing due to rising consumer preferences for home design products. Increasing consumer expenditure on beautiful wall designs as a result of rising disposable income is refuelling the wallpaper business. Consumer retail spending increased 0.6 percent in August compared to July, according to the US Census Bureau and the US Department of Commerce. Furniture and home furnishings were one of the prominent categories to outpace overall retail expenditure growth, growing by a seasonally adjusted 2.1 percent from July to August, which was higher than the 0.9 percent growth. The market for wallpaper is being driven by the increasing refurbishment of old infrastructures, as well as the growing population.

North America is expected to gain significant growth over the forecast period due to growing renovation of the housing sector and aging housing inventory in the region. According to Improving America's Housing 2019 report from the Harvard University Joint Center for Housing Studies (JCHS), the remodeling market has expanded more than 50%. Spending on improvements and repairs to owner-occupied and rental properties hit $425 billion in 2017.
