Art has been a part of Simon's life from the very beginning. He started drawings at just 13 years old, because he knew that art didn't only please people but also made you who you were going to be in this world - whether or not they could see it depended on your heart."

Simon says making art illustration creations trains one's brain into focusing exclusively on what its creator desires; if those thoughts aren't backed up with reality then there will never be anything worth living for! The artist spends hours upon end thinking about exactly how each sketching and how should go until finally coming out as something perfect: "It gives meaning"
