ROCKVILLE, MARYLAND, UNITED STATES, November 24, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As per a new report published by Fact.MR - a market research and competitive intelligence provider, the global transportation management system market is anticipated to reach a valuation of around US$ 6.9 Bn by 2021.

Under the likely scenario, the market is set register a CAGR of around 10.7% over the projection period of 2021 to 2031. North America remains the growth engine for transportation management system revenue owing to its expanding supply chain activities.

The notion that large enterprises form the backbone of most economies does not hold true in the present world. Apart from creating new employments, the role of small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in direct value-added exports and total value-added exports has also been expanding across several countries.

With their growing stature, SMEs have started to embrace technology to streamline their business processes in order to stand competitive amid their large-scale counterparts.
