Joseph Albert Gorski

The author wanted the reader to fully understand the flow of government transactions and other optimistic approaches for a different place or State.

“This is perfect for those who enjoy non-fiction that explores governments and politics, as well as the influence big business and banks have on government agendas. It also is a great read for those who tend not to vote or tune out politics as a whole in their lives, as it helps to showcase the faults that lay not on one side of the aisle or another but will all sides as a whole, and how new ideas and change can help put an end to violence and corruption.” — Tony Espinoza, Hollywood Book Review.

Joseph Albert Gorski is a graduate of Rutgers-Newark College of Arts and Sciences with a degree in Business Administration and a minor in Political Science. He has several books full of ideas and concepts to help the citizens of the world.
