Who can be a member of Synergize?
Anyone.

The community is open to people of all professions and walks of life. Babysitting or knitting lessons, house cleaning, professional advice on interior design – every contribution to the group matters. Outside of membership, any local business is also welcomed to join the initiative and make a special offer to the group's members.

Synergize and Indy Auto Man are constantly looking for solutions to support people and provide them with more opportunities. They believe that everyone deserves better living conditions and a brighter outlook in Indianapolis. These partners understand what it's like to need help and have both benefited from the support of caring people.

Individually, they have extended each of their impacts in the downtown and northern communities of Indianapolis and have worked together for several months. Now, Indy Auto Man and Synergize are ready to take their shared vision farther.

"Honestly, more businesses should be working together like this," said Arron Stanton, founder of Synergize. “Neither of us are in this to get deals for our members or our employees. That’s just a side effect of Synergize and Indy Auto Man trying to make our communities better, together.”

This new member discount from Indy Auto Man serves as a thank-you to Synergize members for their efforts in helping other people in Indianapolis.

Stanton knows a lot about investing in people. Synergize is making a conscious effort to redefine ROI as Ripples of Impact rather than Return on Investment. The professional group is built on creating transformational relationships that create ripples of impact beyond its members.

Every month, the group’s 4:30 Meetup benefits a different nonprofit organization. Between Meetups, Synergize actively builds relationships between its members. They put efforts into organizing meeting events where all community members can spend time among associates and friends, share ideas and get a helping hand in hard times. Like Indy Auto Man, Synergize supports various causes around the community. Most recently, the two businesses worked alongside Hue Murals to sponsor and plan Indy Arts Fest.

Everyone contributes something unique, making us better. Businesses that invest time and kindness in Synergize, like Indy Auto Man, build relationships with our people and gain help from the community” concerns. We are stronger together.”

Another way Indy Auto Man dealership gives back is through their IAM 4 INDY program. Through the program, the dealership gives up to one car per quarter to someone in need. “People will impact their community upon getting a car from us,” said Victor Figlin, GM at Indy Auto Man. “That’s the whole goal of this program. It aligns so well with ROImpact because the person helps multiple people.”
