With growth in pollution level and population, the car rental industry has experienced a drastic transformation over the past few years, and is one of the most prominent industries in fleet transportation. Manufacturers and consumers rely on different car rental schemes, which are cost-effective. In addition, car rentals are majorly contributing to curb the pollution level of the atmosphere by reducing the volumetric sales of owned vehicles. Moreover, with increase in air traffic and growth in rise in trend of online booking in travel industry, car rentals are the preferred options to travel, as cars are the most economical and faster mode of transportation. These advantages are promoting the growth of the car rental industry at an exponential rate.

By the type of car, the car rental market is categorized into luxury car, executive car, economical car, sports utility vehicle (SUV), and multi utility vehicle (MUV). The economical car segment accounted for the highest revenue in 2015, is anticipated to grow at a CAGR of 12.5%, owing to high rate of adoption of economy cars in the emerging economies of Asia-Pacific and LAMEA.

By rental category, the car rental market is bifurcated into on-airport and off-airport. The off-airport category is further divided into local usage, outstation, and others. In 2015, the off-airport rental category segment accounted for over 61% of the market share, and is anticipated to register a CAGR of 12.0%. This is attributed to the development of travel industry and rise in disposable income globally. The outstation off-airport rental category is anticipated to witness fastest growth, registering a CAGR of 12.8%, due to improvement in road infrastructure globally.

Furthermore, North America accounted for the highest revenue in 2015, and is anticipated to grow at a CAGR of 8.8%, owing to the rise in disposable income of people in countries such as the U.S. and Canada. Asia-Pacific is projected to grow at the highest CAGR of 16.5% owing to high rate of adoption of economy and executive cars.
