Insulin occurs in nature and is used for lowering glucose hormones by many diabetic people for the regulation of blood sugar. People who suffer from type 1 diabetes are compensated by supplementary insulin which the body cannot produce. Patients who suffer from type 2 diabetes need insulin if the other drugs are not allowing the maintenance of sufficient control over the blood sugar.

There has been a need for insulin for ensuring effectiveness and safety. Failure in the proper storage of insulin leads to the breakdown of the insulin, and also loses the ability to regulate the level of blood sugar and predictably. Suitable insulin storages are very crucial for the maintenance of insulin efficacy.
