Rise in investment in R&D by the private and government sectors resulting in the increase in research laboratories is fueling the market

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES,
December 1, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/
-- The deoxyribonucleic acid \(DNA\) Purification Market is estimated to be valued at USD 5.35 Billion by 2027, growing at a CAGR of 7.9% over the projected timeframe.

Reports And Data

There has been an increase in the laboratories in developing nations owing to the increase in investment in R&D by government and private sectors. Investment in research and awareness of the importance of diagnostics in healthcare is also driving the market. The DNA purification market is highly fragmented due to the presence of various international and regional vendors.

North America holds the largest market share, followed closely by Europe. The high cost of instruments and expensive research procedures are not an issue in developed regions. Availability of skilled workers and advancement in technology is also boosting the market in these regions. APAC is forecasted to have the highest growth rate in the year 2026, owing to the emergence of research and clinical testing laboratories. The government in this region are focused on organizing capital spending programs for research laboratories and academic institutions to encourage the growth of the market.
