ALBANY, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, December 2, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/

-- Essential oils, or volatile oils, are hydrophobic liquids extracted from the fruits, wood, flowers, etc., of plants. They are generally derived via steam or water distillation, carbon dioxide (CO₂) extraction, cold pressing, etc. Examples of essential oils include cedarwood, eucalyptus, lavender, lemongrass, rosemary, tea tree, ylang-ylang, etc. These oils, which have characteristic fragrances and numerous therapeutic properties, are extensively used as medications for aromatherapy or as carriers in drug delivery applications. Essential oils are utilized in manufacturing perfumes, soaps, cleaning gels, etc., across the globe.

Global Essential Oil Industry Trends and Drivers:

The inflating awareness regarding the health benefits of naturally sourced oils, such as healing irritated and scarred skin, relieving muscle tension, eliminating harmful bacteria, etc., is one of the key factors driving the essential oil market. In line with this, the increasing usage of product variants in the form of decongestants, antibacterial agents, carminatives, etc., to treat cough, bronchitis, and other respiratory tract infections is acting as another significant growth-inducing factor.

Moreover, the widespread adoption of these oils in the conservation and preservation of several food products, including candies, confections, pickles, etc., is further catalyzing the market growth. In addition to this, the shifting consumer preferences towards natural and organic food items with extended shelf-life and limited quantities of preservatives are anticipated to fuel the essential oil market over the forecasted period.
