Taking the time to protect homes against emergencies like fires can make all the difference. Disasters strike with no warning, and can happen to anyone, so it pays off to play it safe.”

Compleat Restorations

has been serving Ephrata, York, and the surrounding Pennsylvania areas for over 40 years. It is trusted by the community to provide essential services such as fire and water damage restoration for both residential and commercial properties, as well as solutions to environmental issues such as mold, asbestos, and biohazards.

According to the Red Cross, they respond to 27% more home fires in the winter than in the warmer seasons. With the winter months arriving, Compleat is releasing a shortlist of ideas and guidelines to implement for homeowners to keep houses safe throughout the snowy season. Here are the 5 most effective tips for protecting homes from winter fire hazards:

1. Keep anything that can burn more than 3 feet away from heating sources, whether it be a fireplace, space heater, or candles. Never use ovens to heat homes.
2. Take precautions with electrical setups. Ensure to not overload a powerstrip with too many large devices connected. If the house is older, get an electrical inspection.
3. Test smoke alarms once a month, and have an “escape plan” prepared to get everyone out of the house safely in case of an emergency.
4. Never leave heating devices like space heaters unattended. These are responsible for 44% of house fires. Buy devices that utilize an automatic shutoff if they are tipped over.
5. Place a fire extinguisher(s) in an area where it is quickly reached from all corners of the house. Help train children that are of age how to use an extinguisher on their own.

Taking the time to protect homes against emergencies like fires can make all the difference. Disasters strike with no warning and can happen to anyone, so it pays off to play it safe. When things go bad, it is essential to work with professionals who are armed with the right equipment and experience to restore properties to its previous condition, safely. Compleat Restorations will do the heavy lifting of restorative work, so homeowners can attend to what matters most.
