China is the largest manufacturer of cashmere wool followed by Mongolia, Afghanistan, Iran, and Turkey. Clothes made from cashmere are often considered a luxury item; however, not all the items are equally priced. White cashmere fibers are priced high as they are rare and do not require any form of dyeing. The global cashmere clothing market is driven by the rise in consumption of premium quality clothing and the impact of fashion as a culture throughout the world. The demand for cashmere clothing is also supplemented by increase in disposable income and penetration of internet and media throughout the globe. However, heavy production cost coupled with the low availability of raw materials act as the major restraint for the global cashmere clothing market.

The cashmere clothing market is segmented based on type, end user, and region. Based on the type, the market is classified into sweaters, trousers, coats, dresses, and others. By end user, the market is divided into men, women, and children. By region, it is studied across North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific, and LAMEA.

Some of the major players analyzed in this report are Burberry Group plc., Dolce & Gabbana, Ermenegildo Zegna, Giorgio Armani S.p.A., Herms International S.A., Kering S.A., Kiton, LVMH Moet Hennessy Louis Vuitton SE, Prada, Ralph Lauren Corporation, and Versace.
