

Get It Girl's New Facebook Community Focuses on Empowering Women

Account serves as an online network for female education, support and empowerment

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, December 2, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Maurgesha McAlister, founder of Get It Girl, is pleased to announce the launch of the company's all-new Facebook page, meant to establish a community which will empower women through education, literacy and awareness.

In joining the welcoming community, visitors will have access to resources and support from women all over the world, but with the same mission, female empowerment. The page will serve as a library of helpful items like, self-care tips, news articles, exercise programs, and much more.

The Las Vegas-based company strives to help women and girls, alike, capture their goals by way of useful online content, whether webinars and both mentoring and outreach programs. McAlister initially launched the company shortly after the birth of her first daughter because of the importance of providing guidance per the availability of mentors and role models.

Female Empowerment

“Women are too often encouraged to work for others, rather than starting their own businesses,” said McAlister. “We plan on hosting events and conferences to help with the women empowerment movement and encourage women to use their talents and training to become entrepreneurs themselves.” The company also plans on launching a series of online courses and ebooks in the near future as well.
