Presenting virtually, Dr. Younger made some initial remarks and then fielded numerous questions from the group.

“I genuinely love speaking to new dental professionals, who are on the threshold of entering dentistry,” said Dr. Younger, who is also a practicing dentist. “We have a unique perspective given that TempStars has completed tens of thousands of temping and hiring contracts between dental offices, and hygienists and assistants. We have a real ‘finger in the pulse’ of the dental temping and hiring job market.

From a practical standpoint, Dr. Younger also talked about “What dental offices are seeking when looking to hire a great hygienist or dental assistant,” as well as, “How the new graduates can recognize and avoid then common pitfalls when looking for temping and hiring opportunities.”

He added that he benefits as much as the graduates do from the interaction.

“I like to stay connected and hear what’s top-of-mind as new grads are entering the field,” Dr. Younger said. “The questions, concerns and expectations of new graduates can change over time. It is really important that we adjust our services based on their feedback and make improvements over time.”
