-- Reports and Data has published a new report titled Fantasy Sports

Market that covers all the essential features of the Fantasy Sports market, with key statistical data represented in the form of tables, charts, diagrams, figures, graphs, and other pictorial representation. The report presents a detailed analysis of the industry to project the market growth throughout the forecast period of 2021-2028. It also examines the current trends, offers an analysis of the emerging trends, and provides insightful information of the overall market scenario with regards to market share, market size, revenue growth, CAGR, and comprehensive industry overview.

The Fantasy Sports Market consists of entities (organisations, sole traders, and partnerships) that provide online gaming and betting services selling fantasy sports services. Fantasy sports are referred to as rotisserie sports or roto. They are a number of games that allow a player to participate in a virtual game or season of a league. The teams compete based on statistical performance of their players in actual games. In fantasy sports, a player earns points by converting real-world statistics into fantasy points. Due to wide variety of sporting events held around the world, halting the technical development of the fantasy sports platform will encourage users to participate, providing a favourable opportunity for the market in future.
