PORTLAND, OR, UNITED STATES,
December 6, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/

-- Rise in digitalization among industries across diverse verticals, such as manufacturing, automotive, and energy & utilities are the key factors expected to drive the global cellular IoT market growth. In addition, rise in demand for extended network coverage, growth in inclination toward business expansion beyond mobile broadband, and need to accommodate large number of connected devices among businesses across the globe are some of the other major factors expected to propel the growth of the cellular IoT market. However, fragmentation in the technology market and lack of regulation for spectrum allocation restrain the growth of the cellular IoT market. Furthermore, increase in R&D activities for high-performance RF filters and microwave filters to provide fast data throughput, minimize energy losses, and extend battery life is a global cellular IoT market opportunity for the key players.
