

CLIMATE CHANGE, REAL WORLD APPLICATIONS, DRIVING GROWTH IN HYDROGEN DEMAND, SAYS INFINITY FUEL CELL CEO.

Infinity Fuel Cell and Hydrogen, Inc(tm) CEO reflects on the rapidly evolving and growing market for fuel cells and hydrogen.

WINDSOR, CONNECTICUT, USA, December 6, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Speaking in a wide-ranging interview on the Seeking Delphi™ futurist podcast, Infinity Fuel Cell & Hydrogen,™ Inc., CEO William F. Smith cited global decarbonization goals as a major driver of the current rapid growth in projected demand for hydrogen and hydrogen fuel cells.

“Behind everything, there is growing concern about climate change,” he said.

Investors are starting to take notice”

William F. Smith

He also noted that a multitude of converging factors are leveraging off that concern, adding, “there has been action in the marketplace with important customers and some important countries’ investments that have helped push the industry in a more commercial direction.”

As for the ability of hydrogen electrolyzer and fuel cell producers to gain necessary resources to ramp up to meet expected demand, he said, “investors are starting to take notice.”
