-- Reports and Data has published a new report titled Health Drinks Market that covers all the essential features of the Health Drinks market, with key statistical data represented in the form of tables, charts, diagrams, figures, graphs, and other pictorial representation. The report presents a detailed analysis of the industry to project the market growth throughout the forecast period of 2021-2028. It also examines the current trends, offers an analysis of the emerging trends, and provides insightful information of the overall market scenario with regards to market share, market size, revenue growth, CAGR, and comprehensive industry overview.

Rising concerns about health issues, especially obesity, among consumers is boosting demand for health drinks. This is a major factor projected to propel growth of the global health drinks market over the forecast period. Consumers are increasing preferring consumption of health drinks that boost energy naturally, that are low in calories, and can even replace the entire meal, in some cases. Consumption of health drinks is rising among health-conscious consumers. However, use of preservatives, such as phosphoric acid, in fruit juices imparts them with a tangy taste and it can also lead to depletion of the bone density. This is a key factor restraining growth of the global health drinks market.
