EINPresswire.com/ -- Waismann Method was founded in 1998 by Clare Waismann RAS/SUDCC. Mrs. Waismann joined forces with two board-certified anesthesiologists and pain specialists, including the program's current medical director, Dr. Michael H. Lowenstein.

Since its inception, the center has maintained one single location worldwide, where all efforts are concentrated, to develop several treatment protocols that can provide patients with the safest and most effective opioid detoxification based on their unique health history. Thousands of patients worldwide have flown to California, where they are admitted to a private room in an accredited hospital to receive the Waismann Treatment™.

"By concentrating all our efforts in one location, Waismann Treatment™ has achieved exceptional development growth over the past two decades," said Clare Waismann. "Moving forward, our focus will remain on providing in-patient comprehensive medical evaluation, the latest customizable detoxification protocols and post-detox recovery care. We are committed to prioritizing the best possible experience while delivering safe and effective treatment results, from beginning to end."

Over the past twenty-three years, Waismann Method has successfully evolved and changed how addiction is viewed and treated. The center works collaboratively with several health care professionals to provide comprehensive and effective options to overcome opioid withdrawal while reducing physical cravings. "When patients are free from the effects and craving of opioids, they become emotionally present to better adhere and participate in mental health treatment or other therapies to help them sustain a healthy life," says C. Waismann.
