In Tehran, the Resistance Units posted banners in different places that read, “The initiatives and creativity of the youth, especially students, is groundbreaking in the fight against Ali Khamenei.”

Other posters had photos of Iranian Resistance leader Massoud Rajavi and NCRI president-elect Maryam Rajavi.

Some of the posters read, “Iranian students will rise against the mullahs in the name of freedom.”

Members of the Resistance Units visited the graves of the three students who were killed on December 7 and laid flower wreaths on the graves on behalf of the Iranian Resistance. “We honor Student Day. On behalf of the Iranian people, the Iranian Resistance, and students, we leave flowers on the gravestone of the three students killed by Shah. Hail to students fallen in the 1988 massacre and in the Nov. 2019 uprising and all those who are fighting the regime,” a Resistance Unit member said.

“Isfahan is not alone,” many banners installed by Resistance Units in Tehran and other cities read.

For several months, the farmers of Isfahan have been protesting the regime's destructive policies that have led to water shortages. In the past weeks, the farmers gathered in the dry basin of the Zayandeh Rud river to voice their protests.

Their movement gained support from thousands of people in the province, who joined them and called on the regime to solve the farmers' problems. On Thursday, security forces attacked the protesters, burning their tents and forcing them to disperse.

On Friday, the farmers returned to the basin of Zayandeh Rud to resume their protests. The regime tried to use force to disperse their protests. The farmers resisted the regime's suppressive forces and chanted anti-regime slogans. Protests continued throughout the day and night.
