Cryptocurrency

The global cryptocurrency market is estimated to be valued at US$ 189.9 billion in 2017 and is expected to witness a CAGR of 56.2% during the forecast period (2017 – 2025).

Cryptocurrency, also known as a cryptosystem, is essentially digital data designed to operate as a standardised means of exchange in which computerised private ledger data is maintained in a distributed ledger system in a decentralised manner. In this example, the ledger would be a peer-to-peer network of computers, all of which are linked via the Internet and each transmitting transactions to other network participants via messages in the form of codes. This network, known as a cryptocurrency, has no known size constraints because it can exist in any scale as long as it meets the basic parameters that are required for its operation. The most basic necessity is that it be shielded from outside manipulation. With such a capability, this form of cryptocurrency can establish an environment in which all network participants I can agree on a set of rules.

Key Market Drivers:

Improved security and a limited supply of these digital assets is driving growth of the cryptocurrency market. Moreover, growing adoption of blockchain technology is again fostering growth of the market. In PwC's 2018 survey of 600 executives from 15 territories, 84% say their organizations have at least some involvement with blockchain technology. Blockchain will generate an annual business value of more than US $3 trillion by 2030.

Expanding multi-retailing including e-commerce industry is also projected to foster growth of the market. According to the India Brand Equity Foundation, e-commerce has transformed the way business is done in India. The Indian E-commerce market is expected to grow to US$ 200 billion by 2026 from US$ 38.5 billion as of 2017.
