The post explains the pros and cons of private daycare and the excellent location of the South Fremont school. The school uses the Montessori method and offers education from childcare to daycare and preschool to kindergarten. Indeed, many Fremont parents choose to keep their children in private preschool programs because of higher standards and better hours. Working parents appreciate a preschool that stays open when they are at work, both in terms of hours and days. The public preschool option in Fremont, while definitely good, does not offer the expanded hours that are needed by working parents.

WORKING PARENTS NEED DAYCARE OPTIONS

The Tesla factory is the only car factory on the West Coast and is the flagship of the vibrant Tesla corporation. Around it many thriving businesses bring in a growing workplace to Fremont, California. Many of these high-paying jobs are considered “working class,” and many “working class” workers are youthful, parent-age people. Not surprisingly, these workers need daycare services for their children. Public education in California starts just at the preschool level and is very limited in hours. Thus, these young, working-age parents are looking for top-rated daycare options near Tesla and South Fremont. With a new school in South Fremont, Learn and Play Montessori is leading the way for both parents and children. The latest post showcases not just the proximity to the Tesla factory but also the best-in-class education that can start even before preschool, that is when a child is a toddler or even younger.
