The Company's corporate structure will not be changing, nor will its financial reporting.

Leland Strange, CEO and Chairman, stated, "This change highlights our goal to grow our industry leading revolving credit platform as the primary business of the company. Intelligent Systems Corporation was one of the early public technology companies with its IPO in 1980 and over the years it has founded, invested, and grown many technology brands including Peachtree Software and Quadram Corporation. CoreCard was one of our investments and trading under our new name reflects the singular long-term focus to growing CoreCard and delivering value to shareholders."
