Charleston, S.C. based PunchListUSA, the first consumer marketplace to digitize home inspection data for instant estimates and online ordering of home repair and improvement services, is one of the innovative technology services changing the landscape of home inspection. Together the two companies will expand on their existing data integration and, through a phased launch, provide all of Pillar to Post’s North American franchise partners and customers with streamlined access to instant repair pricing via PunchListUSA’s proprietary pricing engine which

product catalogue and machine learning to decode home inspection reports into simplified and accurate repair and renovation estimates.

“Our mandate at Pillar To Post is to ensure confident home buying and ownership,” added Dan Steward. “Our partnership with PunchListUSA ensures that millions of homeowners across North America will receive not only the best-quality inspection but also tech-enabled line-item pricing guidance from an industry-leading services provider to make informed decisions with peace of mind.”

According to PunchListUSA CEO and Co-Founder Min Alexander, “Technology simplifies our daily lives - yet homeownership remains unpredictable and difficult to navigate for many,” said Alexander. “In connecting PunchListUSA’s repair pricing engine services to the No. 1 home inspection company in North America with the most tech-forward inspection platform, we’re taking a crucial step forward to deliver on our mission to provide homeowners with easy access to insight-driven, turnkey lifecycle services that make maintaining and improving their homes stress-free.”
