□The coronavirus pandemic has a huge impact on businesses and has already caused an unprecedented collapse of economic activities. The COVID-19 impact is straining the healthcare systems globally.

□The COVID-19 cases are increasing due to direct or indirect contact between humans. There has been no evidence or confirmation that animals can spread COVID-19 to humans. The myth that animals can spread the virus to humans has increased the number of abandoned pets.

□Healthcare facilities are stocking up the animal-related health products, considering the high demand. This is expected to further create financial strain on the market due to procurement inefficiencies and wasted speeding. Due to the pandemic situation, many hospitals and veterinary clinics are overstocking the products.
